A. Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People was established by the General Assembly at its thirtieth session in 1975.

In its resolution 3376 (XXX) of 10 November 1975, the General Assembly expressed grave concern that no progress had been achieved towards the exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights in Palestine, as reaffirmed by the Assembly in 1974, including the right to self-determination without external interference and the right to national independence and sovereignty, and towards the exercise by the Palestinians of their inalienable right to return to their homes and property "from which they have been displaced and uprooted".

By the same resolution, the General Assembly decided to establish the Committee and requested it to consider and recommend to the Assembly a programme designed to enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights. In drawing up its recommendations, the Committee was asked to take into account "all the powers conferred by the Charter upon the principal organs of the United Nations". The Assembly also requested the Committee to submit its recommendations within six months for consideration by the Security Council.

The Committee was authorized to establish contact with, and to receive and consider suggestions and proposals from, any State and intergovernmental regional organization and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). In 1974, the Assembly had invited the PLO to participate in the sessions and the work of the Assembly, and of all international conferences convened under the auspices of the Assembly and of other organs of the United Nations in the capacity of observer, and had asked the Secretary-General to establish contacts with the PLO on all matters concerning the question of Palestine.

The Committee held its first meetings between February and May 1976 and formulated a number of recommendations addressed to the Security Council, which were included in its first report.

The Committee affirmed that the question of Palestine was "at the heart of the Middle East problem" and no solution could be envisaged which did not take fully into account the legitimate aspirations of the Palestinian people. The Committee urged the Security Council to promote action for a just solution, taking into account all the powers conferred on it by the Charter. The participation of the PLO, as the representative of the Palestinian people, on an equal basis with other parties, was "indispensable", the Committee stated, in all deliberations and conferences held under United Nations auspices.

Recommendations in the Committee's report included a two-phase plan for the return of the Palestinians to their homes and property, a timetable for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the occupied territories by 1 June 1977, and endorsement of the inherent right of the Palestinians to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty in Palestine. The Committee's recommendations were endorsed by the General Assembly at its thirty-first (1976) and subsequent sessions by overwhelming majorities, but have remained unimplemented because of lack of consensus in the Security Council.

The Committee served as the preparatory body for the International Conference on the Question of Palestine which was held in Geneva from 29 August to 7 September 1983. The Conference adopted a Declaration and Programme of Action for the Achievement of Palestinian Rights, which included guidelines for a solution of the Palestine question through the convening of an international peace conference on the Middle East under the auspices of the United Nations. The proposal and guidelines for such a conference were endorsed by the General Assembly by an overwhelming majority in its resolution 38/58 C of 13 December 1983.

The General Assembly, at its forty-third session, adopted resolution 43/176 of 15 December 1988 by which, inter alia, it called for the convening of the International Peace Conference on the Middle East, under the auspices of the United Nations, with the participation of all parties to the conflict, including the PLO, on an equal footing, and the five permanent members of the Security Council, based on Security Council resolutions 242 (1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338 (1973) of 22 October 1973 and the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination. The resolution spelled out five principles for the achievement of comprehensive peace in the region that included the withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, and from other occupied Arab territories; guaranteeing arrangements for security of all States in the region, including those named in resolution 181 (II) of 29 November 1947, within secure and internationally recognized boundaries; resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with General Assembly resolution 194 (III) of 11 December 1948, and subsequent relevant resolutions; dismantling the Israeli settlements in the territories occupied since 1967; and guaranteeing freedom of access to Holy Places, religious buildings and sites. By the same resolution the Security Council was requested to consider measures needed to convene the International Peace Conference on the Middle East, including the establishment of a preparatory committee for such a conference. The resolution was adopted by an unprecedented majority of 138 votes in favour, 2 against and 2 abstentions.

The above provisions were reaffirmed by the General Assembly in its resolution 44/42 of 6 December 1989. An even larger number of States, 151, cast their votes in 1989 in favour of the convening of the International Peace Conference on the Middle East. Three States voted against the resolution and one abstained.

The members of the Committee - originally a 20-State body but expanded in 1976 to 23 States* - are: Afghanistan, Cuba, Cyprus, German Democratic Republic, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Nigeria, Pakistan, Romania, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian SSR and Yugoslavia. In 1990, 20 countries are observers at the Committee meetings. The League of Arab States and the Organization of the Islamic Conference also participate in the Committee meetings as observers.

On the basis of General Assembly resolutions 3210 (XXIX) and 3237 (XXIX) of 1974, and the subsequent decision taken by the Committee in 1976, the PLO, as the representative of the Palestinian people and the principal party to the question of Palestine, was invited to participate in the Committee's deliberations as an

On 15 December 1988, the General Assembly adopted resolution 43/177 in which it decided that the designation "Palestine" should be used in place of the designation "Palestine Liberation Organization" in the United Nations system, without prejudice to the observer status and functions of the PLO within the United Nation system, in conformity with relevant United Nations resolutions and practice.

- To exert all efforts to promote the implementation of its recommendations, including representation at conferences and meetings and the sending of delegations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly on an annual basis;

- To extend its co-operation to non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in their contribution towards heightening international awareness of the facts relating to the question of Palestine and creating a more favourable atmosphere for the full implementation of the Committee's recommendations, and to take the necessary steps to expand its contacts with those organizations.

B. Division for Palestinian Rights

At the request of the General Assembly, contained in its resolution 32/40 B of 2 December 1977, the Secretary-General established within the Secretariat of the United Nations a Special Unit on Palestinian Rights in 1978, which was upgraded to Division status in 1982. The Division for Palestinian Rights is part of the Office for Political and General Assembly Affairs and Secretariat Services of the United Nations Secretariat and its mandate has been expanded several times over the years.

The Division serves as secretariat for the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, and carries out its functions in consultation with and under the guidance of the Committee.

Monitoring of political and other relevant developments. The Division is authorized and requested by a series of General Assembly resolutions to monitor political and other relevant developments, regional and international, affecting the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people. It also collects information and regularly reports to the Committee on the situation in the occupied Palestinian territory, as well as on the policies and practices of Israel, the occupying Power, towards the Palestinian people.

Regional seminars on the question of Palestine. The Division, under the guidance of the Committee, organizes regional seminars on the question of Palestine with the participation of experts, parliamentarians, government representatives, and Committee members and observers. Twenty-six seminars have been held since 1980.

In recent years, in accordance with the priority objectives of the Committee, the seminars have focused on the following major topics:

- The convening of the International Peace Conference on the Middle East;
- The role of the PLO;
- The question of Palestine and public opinion (in the region concerned);
- The United Nations and the question of Palestine.

Since December 1987, the convening of the International Peace Conference on the Middle East has been discussed with particular urgency in the light of the intifadah, the popular uprising in the occupied Palestinian territory, and subsequent developments, in particular, the proclamation of the State of Palestine and the Palestinian peace initiative.

Regional symposia and international meetings for NGOs. The Division, under the guidance of the Committee, organizes regional symposia and international meetings for NGOs, and co-operates with such organizations. The Programme of Action adopted by the International Conference on the Question of Palestine declared that the role of NGOs remains of vital importance in heightening awareness of and support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination and to the establishment of an independent sovereign Palestinian State. Furthermore, the Conference urged and encouraged NGOs to increase awareness by the international community of the economic and social burdens borne by the Palestinian people as a result of the continued Israeli occupation.

In order to promote the implementation of the Programme of Action, and pursuant to General Assembly resolution 38/58 B of 13 December 1983 and subsequent resolutions, the scope of the Division's activities was broadened and the Division was requested to convene symposia and international meetings in different regions to heighten awareness of the facts relating to the question of Palestine.

The regional symposia and international meetings, in accordance with the priorities established by the Committee, lay emphasis on the objective of convening the International Peace Conference on the Middle East, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and discuss action-oriented proposals in workshops on topics of particular interest to the various NGO constituencies.

At present, the Division, through the International, African, Asian, European, Latin American and Caribbean, and North American co-ordinating committees, elected by the NGOs participating in meetings sponsored by the Committee, maintains a working relationship with over 800 NGOs throughout the world. Interested NGOs, which support the goals of the Committee and have concrete programmes of activities in this area of work, can participate in the symposia and meetings, after filling out an application questionnaire which is submitted to the Committee for approval. Other NGOs can attend as observers.

International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. The Division organizes the annual observance of 29 November as the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People at United Nations Headquarters in New York and at the United Nations offices at Geneva and Vienna, and promotes the commemoration of the Day in many other cities around the world.
